GUIDE TO LEGITIMATE ONLINE WORK OPPORTUNITIES

This is a quick guide to current, legitimate work from home opportunities.

We have compiled a list of legitimate resources which you can use to browse and apply for open positions.

Some links will require that you sign up for their newsletter, to receive regular updates from companies looking to hire remote workers.

Others are websites which you can use just like a search engine by entering a keyword. You can also search by job category and the other filters, so you can find positions that match your criteria.

There is also a freelance section. Here you can find a list of sites you can register with, in order to offer your skills as a freelancer, to small companies or individuals looking to hire for certain skills or projects.

(If you have any troubles with the direct links (clicking on the name of the site) just see the last page to copy and paste the URL.)

Rat Race Rebellion

This is a website that publishes new, legitimate opportunities almost daily. You can check them out any time for recent updates. They typically post a list of available jobs for each day, and they also have ads and articles featuring particular opportunities.

I will note that there are some 'penny job' ads on this site, as I like to call them, (these tend to be surveys or micro tasks that you can complete for a few cents each task). These are also legit but you'll generally have to spend several hours a day just to make a few dollars, or get rewards you can use at certain stores.

Pennyhoarder

If you go to 'Jobs' under the 'Make Money' tab, you will find a list of current job openings, along with their posting date. You can click on the image that represents each job to learn more about it.
